

The Last Airborne

A recount of remembrance and solitude at Omaha Beach

submitted by Nathan Bolts

Today is the 75th anniversary of D-Day: the huge, costly, and ultimately successful allied land assault on Hitler's Fortress Europe. Although mere words never can even remotely capture what happened that fateful day on Omaha Beach, I want to share a powerful experience that Imogene and I once had there.

One morning in July 1990, my dear late wife, Imogene, and I stood on the 100-foot-high cliff overlooking Omaha Beach. Even with a week in Paris (our favorite city) and ten days in our beloved Ireland ahead of us, we assumed this moment would be the emotional highpoint of this trip.

In the spring we had felt the urge for another trip to Europe in general, and Paris in particular. We had toyed with visiting the newly reunited Berlin, but that came in second to touring Brittany and Normandy.

After renting a car at Charles de Gaulle Airport we headed west. We would return for a week in Paris (our third-and next to last-visit) before flying to Dublin. Another rental car would take us west to rendezvous with long-time dear friends, Sharon and Kent Smith. After touring the West of Ireland, Imogene and I would return home, and Sharon and Kent would continue on to England's Lake District. Peaceful all.

Both Imogene and I had left home with bad sinus bouts, but we holed up in a Brittany ocean side hotel to heal while watching French families on holiday along the beach below our hotel window. Right off we always found a good patisserie. We swear by the medicinal power of good spice-free European pastries.

Feeling better, we toured the Brittany and Normandy countrysides, beaches and villages, and the Bayeux tapestry. Some beaches were crowded with people, some still held the reinforced concrete bunkers with their large caliber, rapid-fire guns aimed to strafe the beach. Several times we ended our day by watching the sun set behind Mont St. Michelle. We saved Omaha Beach until last.

We looked out over the huge and immaculately maintained U. S. Cemetery above Omaha Beach. Finally, we turned to study the beach and the narrow sand spit that ran parallel to the beach for some 150 yards, creating a lagoon some fifty feet wide between spit and beach. We wished to descend the long concrete stairs and walk the sand spit, but it was occupied. In a place such as this, deference to personal space and solitude is understood.

We watched a tall thin woman, dressed in black. Being 100 feet higher and some 75 yards distant, and seeing only her back, we guessed her to be 50-ish in age, maybe older. She walked slowly, stopping every few steps to look down at something held with both hands. Letter? Photograph? Telegram from the government? Father? Uncle? Brother? We so wanted to know, maybe to console. But, she surely was deep within herself, where she needed to be. She had not come all this way to visit, but to try and sense something of what this beach had seen that June day 46 years ago, to sense something of the Hell her loved one had met and, probably, not survived.

We too were burdened with wanting to recapture a sense of the destruction, the desperation, the fear,

The Kitchen Renovation and Dining Expansion Project is expected to start construction in Aug. 2019. Parking in the front of the building will be affected through at least the first phase (Feb. 2020). Three handicap spaces will remain available and all street parking in front of the building will be designated for visitors.

Please contact Sarah Duggan at (785) 323-3878 if you have questions. Happy Construction Season!

In Flanders Field

by Lieutenant-Colonel John McCrae written during the First World War

In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely signing, fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the Dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe:
To you from failing hands, we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields.

the carnage, the courage that occurred that day along a beach now being disturbed only by a gently lapping surf. We, of course, never really considered how we might have handled the situation had a hint of that horrible time slammed into our brain waves. But, viewing the long rows of graves holding the loyal and brave who had fallen on the sands only a few yards away, I shuddered at the thought that on D-Day I was a mere five years shy of draft age. History's caprice could have fashioned a different destiny for those of my age.

Finally, with the spit empty, we descended and walked the sand. Ahead of us a large flock of gulls was scurrying to keep a distance. Ultimately, we were too close, and the gulls ran to take off. The last gull airborne had been hopping, had been having difficulty clearing the sand. That's when a flash from an earlier, violent time broke through. That gull's right leg was but a stub.

On the Secret of the Butterfly Valve

submitted by Helen Roser

I knew that sound. Time for a little wicked fun. The car was parked at the curb or in a parking lot. Behind the wheel was a frustrated man, wasting gas and flooding the engine. The engine wouldn't turn over and start.

I was a passer-by, dressed in my East coast fashion. Nice suit. Hose and heels. Hat, with strong hat pin, and gloves. I tapped on his window with gloved hand and said: "Sir, I can help you."

The response was either a grouchy: "Oh go away!" or a plaintive: "It won't start!" To the receptive one, I said: "Please pop the hood and come out." I was taking off my gloves and putting them and my purse on the fender. I told him: "Raise the hood, please."

By now, there usually was an audience of curious men. The man is standing, frustrated. She is bending over the engine. What is going on?

I unscrewed the little part that held the big air filter in place. It was light weight and I lifted it off and set it and the little part on the engine. Exposed was the culprit, the butterfly valve in the top of the exposed important carburetor.

Taking out my strong hat pin, I said quietly to the man: "Please get in your car and start the engine." The man always howled: "But it won't start!" Holding my hat pin, I said quietly: "It will now." So he got in, started the engine, I gave the butterfly valve a little tap with my hat pin and the engine roared to life.

Speaking to him in his window, I said: "please leave it running and come out, sir." He did as the male audience said things like: "Well, I'll be damned!"

I reassembled his running engine and put my gloves back on, saying: "Please close the hood." He slammed it down. Smiling, I said softly: "You're good to go, sir", and walked away.

I loved that Mercury, though it drove some owners crazy. I had my little experience several times.

The last time I bought a car, I asked the salesman: "Does this car have a twin or four barrel carburetor?" Suppressing a smile, he said: "Ma'am, this car doesn't have a carburetor."

How can that be? A carburetor is its life, its personality!

After 79 years of driving on the East and West coasts, I hadn't killed anyone yet. So I decided to quit while I was ahead.

But now those boring little cars that even drive themselves. Ugh. Not like my Mercury. Now there was a car with personality!

IL Resident Council Minutes, May 6, 2019

Members present: Pat Vogt, Bob Crawford, Jean Beatty, Nyle Larson, Ron Williams, Jo Call, Elaine Manges, Marilyn Ray, Steve Owens, Carol Balding, Leo Lake, Jan Vanderbilt, Nancy Kopp and Jo Lyle.

Staff present: Lonnie Baker, Jayme Minton and Monte Spiller

Updates

General Update: Lonnie shared that the team is hopeful the courtyard renovation will be completed within three weeks, except for bar furnishings as the exact counter heights of the bar has yet to be finalized.

The parking lot behind the maintenance shop is completed and awaiting lines to be painted. In the near future, maintenance and some transportation vehicles will be moved to the new lot. In addition to more parking, this will allow us to change several of the spaces in front of Lyle Patio currently designated for staff to ultimately become visitor parking.

Recently we narrowed our choices down to three proposals from architects for the wellness building and hybrid apartments. We also have consultants that will assist with the financial aspect of the projects, as the wellness center will rely heavily on capital campaign funds and the hybrid apartments on pre-sales.

Two options have been recommended by a designer for new lobby furniture. The design boards will be displayed outside of Jayme Minton's office from Friday, May 10, to Friday, May 17. There will forms and a ballot box available to vote on your favorite choice of the two.

Support Services Update: Jayme explained we recently sold three cottages. The Stanton's are moving to 1223 Meadowlark Valley, Snell's are moving to 2231 Meadowlark Rd and Vicki Auman is moving to 1116 Meadowlark Circle. These moves will take place during the July to August timeframe and Abby has other leads that could turn into sales soon.

Home Health has tripled in size with the amount of clients they are able to serve. With the growth in staff, they are going to move offices to accommodate the increase. The team will be moving from their current location near the Park Den to what is currently the South Conference Room, hopefully on a temporary basis until the Wellness building is completed. Jayme stated she will also be moving offices to Annie Peace's old office to help free up space with construction happening.

Approval of April Minutes: Motion to approve minutes was moved and passed.

New Business

It was announced that Pam Oehme was voted as the new member of the Board of Trustees.

An updated copy of the IL Resident Council Terms by members was handed to all individuals in attendance. There are currently four council spots nearing election or re-election including the Chair position.

Old Business

It was expressed there has been occasions when the soup in Prairie Star has not been warm enough and having to be reheated. Also, there was a request to possibly have sherbet as an option along with ice-cream as a dessert choice. Jayme said she will follow up with those two items.

Additional Discussion Topics

There was a question about paintings missing on the second and third floor. Jayme explained some of the paintings have yet to be returned from Art Mingle, but ultimately will be. Also she stated there will be some changing of paintings on different floors stemming from the Art Committee meeting.

There was a complaint of the deodorizer being used on the first floor of being overwhelmingly strong.

Jayme expressed that she and Mike Davis recently met discussing the odor issue and are currently looking at an alternative option that will be installed on Wednesday, May 8.

A request to possibly not have the carpets shampooed on Mother's Day was made. With the large amount of people visiting, they would like to avoid any trip hazards in the hallways.

The menu for Mother's Day in Prairie Star will be printed in this week's Messenger.

Meeting adjourned
