

The Magical Windows of Christmas

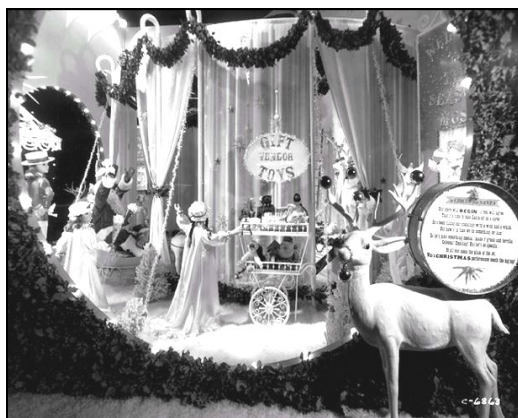

submitted by Nancy Julien Kopp

At least once during the Christmas seasons of my 1940s childhood, my mother and I rode the elevated train from suburban Oak Park to downtown Chicago, exiting at the Marshall Field's station. Pigeons strutted on the wooden platform and railings, flapping soft gray wings now and then, drawing my attention, but Mother pulled me toward a long flight of steps to the street, leaving the pigeons far above us.

We headed to a special, magical place, the big department store's Christmas windows. Often, the wind and cold air stung our cheeks. Sometimes snowflakes floated lazily over us, but it didn't matter. A crowd formed close to the windows of Marshall Field's, and Mother and I wiggled into the center, moving closer and closer to the front until we stood before Christmas Window #1.

There, before us was a wonderland that brought 'oohs' and 'ahs' from the crowd. "Look, Mommy!" could be heard off and on as well when excited children pointed out the obvious to their mothers.

Marshall Fields initiated the Christmas window display in 1897. During November, the windows were covered with brown paper and not unveiled until the day after Thanksgiving. For weeks, designers and their staff worked long hours to create a story told in eleven successive windows, using a fairy tale or child's book theme. Animation came in later years, and the designs grew more and more lifelike. Piles of snow and frost-covered trees looked real enough to touch. A tray of gingerbread men near an oven so perfect, I could almost smell the spicy aroma. A scroll or some other unique prop told part of the story, and the rest came with our imagination.

The earlier windows were toy displays, a marketing scheme that drew thousands of shoppers. Later, in the mid-40s, the story windows began, and Uncle Mistletoe and Aunt Holly were introduced, becoming well-known to all Field's shoppers.

We moved from window to window enjoying the continuing tale. Stories like Snow White and Pinocchio came to life behind the giant windows. They were probably more exciting in the days prior to television, for we had nothing like this anywhere but the movie theaters. By the time we'd walked the entire route, our feet were tingling with the cold, and we headed into the store to warm up.

What better place to thaw out than in the line that ended with a short sit on Santa's lap. By the time, we reached Santa, we'd shed gloves and hats and unbuttoned our heavy coats. I told Santa my dearest wishes, never doubting that he'd remember and bring at least one of the items I'd requested.

When the 1950s rolled around, I made the trip downtown to Marshall Field's with my girlfriends. Even then, my excitement stayed at a high pitch. I noticed more details in the story windows, and my friends and I giggled and chatted, and pointed things out to one another. With rosy cheeks and numbing toes by the time we'd gotten to the end, we headed into the store. Not to see Santa but to savor a cup of hot chocolate, gaze at the giant Christmas tree in the atrium, and then spend some time wandering through the massive place looking for Christmas gifts for our family members. We might finish the day with a Frango Mint, the candy made famous by Marshall Field's.

Today, Field's is no more. The sign in front now says Macy's. It was a sad day for me when that happened. A piece of my childhood crumbled, never to be the same. But the memory of the Christmas windows and my visits to Santa remain even many decades later.

Happy Feet for Christmas

submitted by Polly Ferrell

Meadowlark Hills residents have given generously to our Happy Feet for Christmas project so that families in distress will have warm feet this Christmas. We will be giving 50 pairs of colorful, festive Slipper Socks with treated soles to the Manhattan Emergency Shelter and 30 pairs to the Crisis Center. A total of $275 will allow that to happen and as of Monday, Dec. 9, that goal has been reached!

Any additional dollars given will be used as an extra donation to the Emergency Shelter. The Happy Feet for Christmas jar at the Hospitality Desk will be removed at noon on Friday, Dec. 13. Thank you for your great generosity.

Meadowlark Singers

submitted by Peg Ziser

Thank you to everyone that attended the Meadowlark Singers winter concert. There will be no more practice in December. Meadowlark Singers will start practicing again in the new year on Monday, Jan. 6, at 3:45 p.m.

IL Resident Council Minutes, Nov. 4, 2019

Members present: Jo Lyle, Bob Crawford, Pam Oehme, Nyle Larson, Ron Williams, Bob Kruh, Elaine Manges, Steve Owens, Charlotte Kelly, Carol Balding, Leo Lake, Jan Vanderbilt, Larry Parsons, Nancy Kopp and Carolyn Pulford

Staff present: Lonnie Baker, Jayme Minton, and Monte Spiller

General Update Lonnie shared that it is his understanding there has been limited complaints recently about the construction noise, except for one individual the previous Friday. He asked council members if they have heard of any other complaints. It was expressed that most residents understood some noise is to be expected and seem to be fine with it.

At the upcoming Foundation Board meeting on Tuesday and the Board of Trustees meeting on Thursday, Meadowlark will discuss our next project focusing on the Wellness Center and new independent living apartments. A lot of information has been gathered and we recently received a draft report back from Winkler who reviewed the feasibility of a capital campaign and everything looks positive. The Monarch (new IL apartments) are in the pre-sales phase and have signed up 26 people so far as priority members. The design is developing, and we hope to the last of the construction cost estimate in and will include that with our business case model and present it to the board this week.

Meadowlark has collaborated with K-State Global Campus and will be providing a program to help people understand how best to care for a loved one that has dementia. It is a combination of a four-week online course and two half-day in person classes which will be located here at Meadowlark. The in person classes start today

There has been a lot of positive feedback about the Halloween party and seems to be a great event for the community, residents and staff. It also serves as a great recruitment opportunity for Meadowlark as it allows individuals who may not be familiar with us, the chance to see what we have to offer.

Residents are reminded to be very careful and aware when they are walking in the Courtyard, that if there is anything white on the ground, it most likely is slick. A reminder will also be running in the Messenger.

Support Services Update Jayme shared there is currently an art student helping with the third-floor art and the hanging of new pieces. She also ask that residents be patient and not remove art from the walls as they are working through new ideas with the Art Committee as well.

Approval of October Minutes: Motion to approve minutes was passed with correction.

New Business The updated copy of ILRC policy and procedures manual was approved and passed.

Old Business It was expressed that the landscaping in Meadowlark Valley near the wall across from the cottages could use some attention when the time and season allowed. It was suggested that possibly some trees be planted along with additional plants to help enhance the visual appeal of that area.

There was a request to have leaves cleaned from driveways and surrounding areas. Mike Davis will be notified of the concerns.

Additional Discussion Topics Leo Lake stated he was recently in contact with two former Meadowlark residents, Ted Hodges who currently resides in Salina and Leonard Parker who is in the Dallas area. Both men asked that he tell everyone hello.

The question was asked if there could be a sugar-free alternative available in Prairie Star. It was explained that in the past they ordered pre-made desserts in the attempt to accommodate those requesting sugar-free deserts but was an inconsistent process. The restaurant will look at other options in the future in efforts to offer variety for those who cannot have sugar.

There was also a question about the listing of nutritional value being made available on the menu. It was explained if the restaurant tried to list nutritional value for every item on the menu, it would be a non-stop process of updating and changing the menu daily. Members were reminded that the Prairie Star menu currently list LEAP approved meals, along with gluten free, low sodium, and low fat symbols.

It was shared that an English class from K-State was coming to Meadowlark to join the Prairie Star Writing Group that meets on Tuesdays at 2 p.m. to collaborate and share stories. It was encouraged that others pop in and enjoy the activities.

Meeting adjourned

Project Update

The next two weeks will bring us to the Christmas holiday week and in the meantime onlookers will continue to witness a lot of action on the current jobsite! The crew will be wrapping up the exterior metal framing and boxing in the walls with Dens glass and waterproofing membrane. The storefront windows will be measured and officially go into the supplier's production schedule. Roofers will be installing the insulation on top of the metal decking, in addition to the roofing membrane. That milestone will allow the MEP (Mechanical/Electrical/Plumbing) rough in to begin above the ceiling installation.

The fire sprinkler piping is currently being installed and should be mostly completed this week. The crew will also be starting the ceramic tile in the restroom areas beginning next week. Meadowlark residents and staff greatly appreciate the hard, diligent, and efficient work of the BHS crew and their sub-contractors. Phase One completion is getting closer every day!

Holiday Messenger Schedule

Due to Christmas and New Year's Day, there will be an early Messenger distribution for those two weeks.

Messenger distribution will take place on Tuesday, Dec. 24, and Tuesday, Dec. 31. If you have something you would like submitted in the Messenger, please be mindful of these early editions and contact Sarah Duggan at (785) 323-3878 or Michele Riter at (785) 323-3832.
